

A technical drawing of a building's floor plan. A red-outlined polygonal area is highlighted within a larger structure. The drawing includes various lines representing walls, doors, and structural elements. The red outline starts at a point on the left wall, goes down to a small rectangular area, then up to a point on the right wall, and finally back to the starting point. The overall shape is irregular, with several internal lines suggesting a complex layout. The drawing is oriented horizontally, with the red area occupying the central portion of the frame.

写真

